The President's Cleveland Speech.

livered by President Hoover at Cleveland Saturday night escaped the impression that they were not listening to a politician but to a men who is in deadly seriest about the things he has done and is trying to do. Politics, unfortunately, has come to be shem. in a distressingly large proportion. But there was no shum about Herbert Bonver on the platform of Cleveland public auditorium.

He is filled with impatience at the misrepresents tion of the causes of the depression. He is ready to strike back hard at those who are trying to take water away from him by circulating lies about his His mind is set aquarely against the ames promises that are the dominant character his opponent's campaign. Mr. Hoover is, above all else, a roulist when it comes to practi Instinctively, he athors leadership that excapes reality and leads the public mind safray.

Many months ago there were Republicans and Demotrats and many citizens with no definite party affiliations who were wishing that the White House were occupied by a fighting president. It has been Mr. Honver's political weakness that he is not blessed with the showman's instinct. That weakbess doubt less has made him a better administrator, but it has made it more difficult for him to line up votes for the customary second term. If he is given a second term, incidentally, reslection is one thing he wen't

The man in the White House today to a fig. president. His Cleveland speech removed the lee doubt. He has struck holdy at every point of the opposition that is being effered to him is his campaign. He has spared makiner feelings nor favor to tell his countrymen where he is sure he is right and where he is sure that Franklin D. Roosevalt, John Nance Garner and the Democratic party are wrong.

Democrate patiently have been empanding the their that the United States is the origin of the depression. In a sweeping dental President House demonstrates that Franklin D. Roosevek is either pitifully misinformed or deliberately misle

Democrate have worked bard to make it app that the Hawley-Smoot tariff hill was the height of iniquity—the darkest state on the Republican record-tine shame child of the administration. With a set of figures and statements which Democrats w have plenty of trouble denying Pr again demonstrates their mability to see things, as they actually are and their intention to smear his record, if they can deluce enough voters to make warth while

His Cirveland address was made to the ayed, specifically. They are the success of the vote which Governor Recouver, has been courting. Hany of them find it center to admire the second-geoming of the Democratic candidate than to see eye to eye with President Hoover as he dewhat the depression really ta-a worldwide entestrophe which the United States couldn't escape. But these who are willing to think for themselves must have been impressed with the palpable honesty of his message to them at Cleveland. There, as at Des Molbes, they were treated to facts—the story of leadership to their interest during the years of the

The method of ratification, therefore, is the first thing to consider after congressional action giving the states a proposal to act upon. The convention method is not clear; it is not even established definitely whether ratification of an amendment is a state or a federal function. There are in prospect to separate and distinct state fights to determine which would be more truly representative of popular will-jegislatures or conventions. When it is considered that this prospective state issue involves that extremely difficult matter, the proper belance between rural and urban representation, the true proportions of the problem begin to reveal them-

It is in recognition of the difficulties that lie shead and in the intelligent discussion at this time of ways and means to overcome them that hope for action on the prombition issue reats. Bombet and vituperation are giving way to reason. Prohibitionists and anti-probibitionists of all degrees know that they are facing. It seems not too much to hope that in their mutual concentration there will be created that care operation of democratic action which should produce an acceptable solution arrived at by methods which will represent accurately the will of a nation determined to find a way out of & dangerous situation

Democracy by Instinct.
There is no better time than the midst of a presidential campaign to review the changing attitude loward election of that dignitary. In this year when there is every indication that a large vote will be nat and when voting is discussed almost in terms of life and death any kind of review is likely to dis lose interesting facts.

Whereas the tendency is and has been to apply orinciples of democracy directly to selection of 8 president, the intention of the founding fathers was in the apposite direction. They were frightened of democracy; one of them told the Constitutional corvention. "It would be as unnatural to refer the choice of a proper character for chief magistrate to the people as it would be to refer a trial of colors to a bilad map."

To prevent this "unnaturel" action, framers Constitution provided for electors, who would delberate freely as to their choice, according to principles of representative democracy. This plan was frustrated in short order. Free deliberation gave way to caucuses. Piedged electors, despite absence of provision for them, have been common since 1796 Present operation of the system amounts to popu-election of the president, in fact. On the ballot which Ohio voters will mark there is nothing to show that the voter is not voting firrelly for the president and vice prosident. Significantly, more than half a hundred joint resolutions favoring popular election have been introduced in congress since The United States has been able to assimilate (

arger doss of democracy than its founders dared to think it could. Failure of the electors system is only one instance. The legislative system, too, has felt the will at the people to act directly. Significantly, a great many of its mistakes can be traced to the fallure of representatives to be anything more than a mouthplete for whatever sound from back ome sounds loudest. And who can say that the original plan of the electoral system does not compare favorably with the way a president ectual! is elected after a century and a third of experience

The real problem emerges naturally from the quet tion. In what direction does government proceed toward more or less pure democracy?

Playing Without the Breaks

He believed in Henry Ford's dream of a practical and low-priced horseless carriage when trate former still were firing at the new-fangled contraptions. An engineering genius in his own right, he hefciond-ed Ford and tried to get him a job in one of the automobile shops that might have made Cleveland superior to Detroit, but didn't.

Ford was turned down because he wasn't a train mechanic, the story goes. He returned to Detroit.
When his company was organized Melanowski was given an opportunity to buy five shares of stock. Be ook them, but failed to graup the practical biogistlance of Ford's ambitious dream. Had he held them, he could have been more than a millionaire. But he

He was no stranger to money, however. He w fortunes and lost them. As so often happens, Mil gentus for arrangement was too highly operinthed. It could produce power and motion out of pieces of metal, but it couldn't produce success from its owner's ability.

Melanowski died a pauper, Henry Ford the world's symbol of the motor age. How directed it might have been had Melanowski and Clevel been playing with the breaks of the against them.
